Archbishop Thomas Collins
Encourages us to Pray for Peace...

Below is an excerpt from Archbishop Thomas Collins' response to a terrorist attack on an Iraqi Church in Baghdad archdioceseoftoronto.blogspot.com

I pray for the victims of this absurd violence, even more ferocious in that it has been inflicted upon defenseless people gathered in God's house, which is a house of love and reconciliation. I express my affectionate closeness to the Christian community, now stricken again, and I encourage its pastors and faithful alike to be strong and firm in hope.

Beyond these savage moments of violence, that continue to tear apart the peoples of the Middle East, I would lastly like to renew a heartfelt appeal for peace: it is a gift of God, but it is also the result of the efforts of men of good will, of national and international institutions.

May everyone unite their strengths to end every act of violence!"

Your generosity on November 13th and 14th is deeply appreciated.
